In the center, resting upon a catafalque, in the stillness of death, lay the body of the deceased Princess clad in a robe of spotless satin, whose snowy folds depended over a pall of yellow plush, bordered with blue of a similar material. Her white gloved hands were crossed upon her bosom in an attitude of resigthe pallid countenance, which was pillow of white satin. The scarlet Order the head of the bier, upon a pile of velvet cushions, was the Royal Order of Kalakana. A crucifix stood at the feet, and on either side were candelabra, whose dim rays faintly lighted the otherwise darkened chamber. A magnificent bouquet of white and pale pink roses stood upon a small table at the foot of the crucifix, while at intervals around the catafalque were other vases of flowers. Ranged on either side were three kahilis of ample proportions, each with its attendant, and upon the inner side of the enclosure thus formed were six other bearers who constantly waved kahilis of smaller dimensions over the body. Upon the right, in immediate proximity to it, stood statue-like Her Royal Highness Princess Poomaikelani, who, with an air of tender solicitude kept silent vigil over the remains of the deceased Princess. At the head sat Her Majesty Queen Kapiolani and Her Royal Highness Princess Liliuokalani, elder sister of the deceased, and to the right were their Excellencies Walter Murray Gibson, Prime Minister; Luther the lecturer will compare the life of Aholo, Minister of the Interior; Hon. A Dentist to Royalty. "Dr. Evans," said my friend, "makes, perhaps, $60,000 a year from his practice. He is in demand at all the courts of Europe, and Queen Victoria is very fond of him. I was visiting with him once when he had a letter from the king of Greece, who wanted him to come and fix his teeth for him. He told me that he could not go, as the expense of traveling so far would eat up the profits. He said in going from court to court as a sort of itinerant king's dentist, he only made tours when he could lay them out so as to bring a number of courts in one trip. This practice paid very well, for, in addition to the immense fee which Dr. Evans charged, he was given presents of diamonds and other things of great value. Among his presents were diamond studded snuff boxes, fine rings, diamond pins, and furs which were almost worth their weight in gold. His house in Paris is tilled with beautiful souvenirs, and he At 10 o'clock yesterday morning sol- has presents from all the kings from the

He came daily at 8 o'clock to the emperor and chatted with him while he was dressing. Be then went to the dressing-room of Fugenie and talked English with the empres . Evans was a good gossip and retailed the talk of the court to Napoleon's wife. He was as good a friend of hers as she was of his, for he saved her life one night when an attempt was made to assassinate Napoleon, after the opera by throwing hand-grenades. He also helped her off to England in 1770, when every one else had deserted her. Evans' wife was at the seashore at the time, and Eugenie, in the clothes of Mrs. Dr. Evans passed out of the city as the dentist's w'fe. He took her to the channel and went with her to England. Dr. Evans feared that France would lose in the struggle with Germany. He knew well the constitution of the German army and he warned both Louis Napoleon and Eugenie that they would probably be defeated if they began the war. - Frank G. Carpenter in Cleveland Leader.

How can they do this after paying freight over 3,000 miles of railroad, it may be asked. In the first place hops are better and cheaper here than in the East; again, California barley is the best grown in the United States; but the chief reason is the superior quality of the brew. As they use only the finest artesian water and the very best material, and have all the best and latest machinery, they are able to produce an article that
